The Division of Clergy Personnel

- The Necessity of Ongoing Formation and Education: The preordination formation and education of a priest prepares him for some of the demands placed upon him in his early years of priesthood. It does not, however, fully prepare him for responsibilities he may be asked to assume as additional challenges and opportunities for service are presented.
- To keep pace, growth opportunities need to be available for the development of priests to meet the increasing challenges in their respective ministries.
- Many short-term opportunities for this development, such as workshops, lectures, etc., are provided internally by the Archdiocese. Also, longer term enriching possibilities are available in universities and educational institutions.
- This policy and its implementation procedures is a guide by which Archdiocesan authorities can respond equitably to requests for education assignment arrangements and plan for future staffing needs.
